GAMBLING APP ADDICTION

Gambling applications – like the uber popular DraftKings and FanDuel – hide a dirty secret. They aren't only designed to be a platform that allows a person to make a legal wager.

These applications are designed to get their users addicted – to keep their users gambling even through great financial loss and/or emotional and physical harm. In many ways, these gambling apps have become the cigarettes of the 2020's.

The developers of these applications use the most sophisticated combination of user data, messaging, promotions and imagery imaginable, which has the effect, for many users, of creating an irresistible dopamine-fueled need to gamble.

The platforms are predictive engines, continuously modeling user behavior to create a user experience designed to enrich the gaming platform without regard to the well-being of the user.

Much of the marketing promoting these gambling apps targets young men – a demographic which is particularly susceptible to the type of addiction these platforms are designed to deliver. Sadly, the rate of major depression and suicide among young men suffering from a gambling addiction is skyrocketing.

The online sports gambling industry is largely unregulated. The companies leading the charge – like DraftKings and FanDuel – have designed platforms with no safeguards to create an army of gambling addicts.

AWKO has joined the fight to hold these companies accountable and is committed to seeking justice for those who have suffered harm because of a gambling addiction.

If you or a loved one have:

- 1) been diagnosed with a gambling addiction, or
- (2) diagnosed with depression or anxiety in connection with gambling, or
- (3) attempted or committed suicide because of a gambling addiction, or
- (4) lost more than $75,000 on DraftKings or FanDuel or,
- (5) are a minor who has used DraftKings or FanDuel, you may have a valuable legal claim

Contact us today to learn more about your rights and whether you may be eligible to pursue compensation.

VIDEO GAME ADDICTION

Video game addiction is not some harmless pastime affecting a few kids not engaged in other activities. Recent studies have concluded that more than six million minors in the United States suffer from video game addiction.

Sadly, the consequences of video game addiction – suffered during critical developmental years – are frequently very serious and may be permanent.

Consequences of video game addiction may include:

- Increased rates of depression, anxiety, and antisocial behavior
- Sleep deprivation and low-quality sleep, impairing school performance and brain development
- Physical injuries such as carpal tunnel syndrome
- Worsening symptoms for children with ADHD, ODD, and other neurodevelopmental conditions
- In the most tragic cases, suicide or serious self-harm

What makes the rise of this epidemic of addiction more disturbing is that it is not an accident. The developers of some of the world's most popular video games—including Minecraft, Fortnite, Roblox, and others—intentionally designed their products to be addictive.

Evidence emerging from ongoing litigation shows that game companies studied the developing brains of children and teens and deliberately built reward systems, dopamine triggers, and in-game structures aimed at keeping users online for as long as possible. Why? Because these developers knew that the more time a user spends playing their games, the more money they spend.

Contact us today to learn more about your rights and whether you may be eligible to pursue compensation.

SOCIAL MEDIA ADDICTION

Self-harm, anxiety, depression, eating disorders, and suicide attempts are increasingly common among children and adolescents who become dependent on social media.

Meta, Snapchat, TikTok, YouTube, and other platforms have known for years that excessive use of their products is associated with serious mental health harms in young users.

Despite that knowledge, these companies have deliberately designed their platforms to maximize engagement and keep users—especially minors—on their apps for as long as possible.

Recent jury findings have confirmed what internal documents and testimony have long suggested: these platforms are not neutral tools, but products intentionally designed to be addictive. In a landmark 2026 case, a jury found that social media companies negligently designed their platforms in ways that contributed to severe mental health harms in a young user, including depression and emotional distress.

The result is a generation of children exposed to products that interfere with healthy development—disrupting sleep, damaging self-image, shortening attention spans, and reinforcing cycles of anxiety and depression. These companies consistently prioritized growth, engagement, and profit over the safety and well-being of their youngest users.

If your child has suffered from social media addiction, you may have a legal claim. Contact us today!

SEXUAL ABUSE

Sexual abuse can have lifelong emotional, physical, and psychological effects. Survivors often suffer in silence for years—sometimes decades—before coming forward. Our firm is committed to holding accountable the institutions and individuals responsible for enabling abuse and silencing survivors.

We represent clients across a wide range of sexual abuse cases, including:

- Religious institutions, including the LDS (Mormon) Church, Catholic Church, and other faith-based organizations
- Public and private schools, as well as youth programs and after-school activities
- Departments of Juvenile Justice, jails, and prisons where abuse was permitted or overlooked
- Youth sporting leagues, recreational activities, and summer camps
- Inpatient and residential treatment centers, including facilities for minors and vulnerable adults
- Medical professionals and institutions, including hospitals and clinics
- Group homes, foster care systems, and child protective agencies

We are actively engaging with legislatures across the country to advocate for statute of limitations reform, which is happening in many states. These legal reforms are critical, as they give survivors additional time to come forward and seek justice.

In many cases, survivors were children or teens when the abuse occurred, and the perpetrator was someone in a position of authority or trust.

If you or a loved one experienced abuse in one of these settings, we encourage you to reach out in confidence. You are not alone, and we are here to help.

ROBLOX CHILD SEXUAL EXPLOITATION

Roblox is one of the most popular online gaming platforms in the world, with tens of millions of daily users—many of them children. The platform allows players to interact, chat, and create virtual worlds together. Unfortunately, Roblox can also serve as a place where adult sexual predators target and exploit children online with one prominent financial research firm labeling Roblox a “Pedophile Hellscape.”

Because Roblox has such a large population of young users, predators can use the platform’s communication tools and related messaging services to identify, contact, and groom children. In many cases, predators build trust with young users before coercing them into sending sexually explicit images, engaging in sexual conversations, or attempting to arrange in-person meetings.

The harm caused by this type of exploitation can be devastating. Victims may suffer emotional trauma, reputational damage, and long-term psychological injury. In many cases, children have also been subjected to sexual extortion, stalking, or in-person sexual abuse after initial contact on the platform. Despite the obvious risks, Roblox has failed to implement adequate safeguards—including effective age verification, moderation, and communication protections—to prevent predators from targeting children.

AWKO is at the forefront of litigation seeking to hold Roblox accountable for the harm caused to children and their families. Bryan Aylstock was recently appointed to lead the litigation on behalf of all the victims whose cases are filed in federal court.

If your child was contacted, groomed, or exploited by a predator using Roblox, you may have a legal claim. Contact us today to learn more about your rights and whether you may be eligible to pursue compensation.

GROK / X

Artificial intelligence tools are rapidly transforming the internet—but some companies have deployed these technologies without meaningful safeguards to protect the public. One troubling example is Grok, an artificial intelligence chatbot developed by Elon Musk's company xAI and integrated into the social media platform X (formerly Twitter).

Grok can be used to generate sexually explicit “deepfake” images of real people without their knowledge or consent, including the ability to digitally manipulate images to depict individuals in sexual situations.

Deepfake technology uses artificial intelligence to manipulate images so that they appear realistic—even though the depicted events never occurred. With Grok, users have reportedly been able to generate explicit sexual images of real individuals in seconds. These images often target vulnerable populations, like teens, and can spread rapidly online once created.

The harm caused by this technology can be severe. Non-consensual sexual deepfakes are increasingly recognized as a form of digital sexual abuse, leading to humiliation, reputational damage, emotional trauma, and long-term psychological harm. Once these images are shared online, they can be extremely difficult—if not impossible—to completely remove.

Despite the obvious risks, Grok was deployed without adequate safeguards to prevent the creation of sexually explicit images of real people. Lawsuits are now being filed on behalf of victims whose likenesses were used to generate explicit deepfake images without their consent.

If you or a loved one has been the victim of non-consensual sexual deepfakes created using Grok or similar AI tools, you may have a legal claim. Contact us today to learn more about your rights and whether you may be eligible to pursue compensation.

SIMILAC® AND ENFAMIL® PREMATURE INFANT FORMULA - NECROTIZING ENTEROCOLITIS (NEC)

When fed to premature babies, cow's milk based baby formulas like Similac and Enfamil can substantially increase the risk of the babies suffering a terrible injury called necrotizing enterocolitis. Despite knowledge of that risk, the manufacturers of those products – Abbott and Mead Johnson – did not warn parents and the medical community about the risk of that often-fatal condition.

AWKO lawyers have led the charge to hold those manufacturers accountable for their callous disregard for the safety of premature babies and are proud to have been part of the trial teams that obtained verdicts of $495 million and $60 million against Abbott and Mead Johnson, respectively.

NEC is a devastating condition affecting premature babies' intestines, leading to tissue death, perforation, and scarring, which in turn can require invasive surgery (such as removal of the colon) and lead to sepsis, neurological damage (cerebral palsy) and even death.

Studies spanning decades have shown an increased risk of NEC in premature babies fed cow's milk-based premature formulas (such as Similac Special Care®, Neosure®, Neocate®, Elecare®, EnfaCare.® and Enfamil® Premature) when compared with human milk or human milk-based formulas.

If your child was born prematurely, developed NEC, and was fed Similac or Enfamil formula, you may be eligible for compensation. We are committed to pursuing justice for affected families and holding manufacturers accountable for the harm caused by their products.

THE TIME TO ACT IS NOW

Parents are encouraged to file a claim for their injured children before it's too late!

TALCUM POWDER - OVARIAN CANCER

Johnson & Johnson's Baby Powder and Shower to Shower® products contained talcum powder or "talc." Mined talc often contains asbestos which causes ovarian cancer.

Multiple studies, academics, and practicing physicians have all concluded that women using products containing talcum powder in their genital region regularly have as much as a 30% increase in the risk of developing ovarian cancer.

According to internal documents, Johnson & Johnson (J&J) was aware of asbestos contamination in its talcum powder as early as the 1950s.

Documents show that from at least 1971 to the early 2000s, the company's raw talc and finished powders sometimes tested positive for small amounts of asbestos and that company executives, mine managers, scientists, doctors, and lawyers knew it.

Johnson & Johnson has indicated that it wants to resolve the claims it faces. Although a settlement has not yet been reached, there may be a limited window to bring your claim and be included in any upcoming settlement.

If you or a loved one have been diagnosed with ovarian cancer or a related condition due to J&J's Baby Powder and Shower to Shower® products, you may be entitled to compensation.

CHEMICAL HAIR STRAIGHTENERS / RELAXERS - UTERINE AND OVARIAN CANCERS

Recently published scientific studies have found that women of color who regularly use chemical straightening or hair-relaxing products develop uterine and ovarian cancer at a disproportionately high rate compared to white women.

Specifically, the National Institutes of Health (NIH) reported a two to four-fold (greater than 100%) increased risk of endometrial/uterine and ovarian cancers in two separate publications.

In both instances, NIH targeted the presence of chemicals called “Endocrine Disrupting Chemicals” (EDCs) as the offending agent in the products. These EDCs mimic estrogen and overload the body, leading to the formation of Uterine Fibroids (UF) and the above-referenced cancers.

Alarming, the manufacturers of these products, including L’Oréal, Softsheen-Carson, Luster, ORS, Unilever, Godrej, and others, market the products (e.g., Just For Me®, Olive Oil™, Dark & Lovely®, Motions®, etc.) without warning of these potentially deadly cancers.

If you or a loved one used hair straighteners more than five times a year and later developed uterine or ovarian cancer, you may have a valuable legal claim.

DEPO-PROVERA

Depo-Provera® (medroxyprogesterone acetate) is an injectable contraceptive manufactured by Pfizer and used by millions of women worldwide. Administered every three months, it prevents ovulation and alters the uterine lining to provide extended birth control.

Unfortunately, studies have found that long-term use of Depo-Provera is associated with a significant risk of brain and spinal cord tumors called meningiomas. These tumors form on the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord.

Although meningiomas are typically benign, their location in the central nervous system makes them extremely dangerous. As they grow, meningiomas can impair vision, motor skills, cognition, speech, and balance. Treatment often involves invasive neurosurgery, which carries serious risks and potential for long-term disability.

After failing to provide users of Depo-Provera any warning about the risk of developing tumors, in March 2024, Pfizer publicly acknowledged that it needed to update the Depo-Provera labeling to include the risk of meningioma.

AWKO has been named lead counsel in the litigation to assist women who have developed a meningioma after using Depo-Provera for two or more years.

If you've developed a meningioma – a brain or spinal cord tumor – after using Depo-Provera, call the attorneys at AWKO to learn more about whether you may have a viable legal claim against Pfizer.

DUPIXENT

This prescription medication (administered via injection) is used primarily for the treatment of atopic dermatitis (eczema).

Studies evaluating the adverse effects associated with Dupixent have found that Dupixent users face a significantly increased risk of developing cutaneous T-cell lymphoma ("CTCL").

CTCL can cause severe skin discomfort, persistent scaly patches, plaques, tumors, or generalized redness. It can progress to the blood and ultimately lead to debilitation or death.

CTCL is diagnosed through blood tests, skin biopsies, and imaging tests. The prognosis for CTCL depends heavily on how early it is identified. Early identification results in a near normal life expectancy but later stages offer a much poorer prognosis.

In March 2025, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) placed Dupixent on its quarterly FAERS "Potential Signals" list, confirming it is "evaluating the need for regulatory action," which comes after at least 300 adverse event reports involving lymphoma diagnoses submitted by patients and healthcare providers.

Despite this action and the voluminous scientific data, the manufacturers of Dupixent, Regeneron and Sanofi, have done nothing to warn patients and their doctors about the risk of CTCL.

If you or a loved one has been diagnosed with CTCL after using Dupixent, please call us today for more information.

OZEMPIC

Ozempic®, a GLP-1 receptor agonist manufactured by Novo Nordisk, was originally developed for type 2 diabetes but has since become widely prescribed for weight loss.

Ozempic has been linked to a devastating eye injury, NAION, as well as serious gastrointestinal complications and life-threatening surgical risks which were not adequately disclosed to consumers and health care providers.

The most significant injuries in this litigation include:

- NAION (Non-Arteritic Ischemic Optic Neuropathy) results in sudden vision loss ranging from complete blindness to blurriness and/or loss of the ability to see color
- Gastroparesis (delayed gastric emptying)
- Pulmonary aspiration during general anesthesia or deep sedation Ileus (intestinal obstruction)

The effects of NAION are permanent. Patients suffering from gastroparesis may experience chronic nausea, vomiting, bloating, abdominal pain, and the inability to digest food properly. In severe cases, this can lead to hospitalization, feeding tubes, and long-term disability.

Even more alarming are reports of pulmonary aspiration, where undigested food or stomach contents are inhaled into the lungs during surgery—causing potentially fatal complications.

If you or a loved one experienced sudden vision loss, gastroparesis, aspiration injury, or bowel obstruction while using Ozempic or related medications, you may be entitled to compensation.

CARTIVA TOE IMPLANT

The Cartiva® Synthetic Cartilage Implant (SCI) was marketed as a breakthrough treatment for arthritis in the big toe joint, offering pain relief while preserving joint motion. The device was promoted as a less invasive alternative to fusion surgery, which permanently immobilizes the toe.

After receiving a significant number of device failure complaints, the manufacturer Stryker voluntarily issued a nationwide recall of the Cartiva implant in December of 2024. Published scientific literature estimates the incidence rate of failure to be as high as 50%.

The specific defect centers around the synthetic material used in the Cartiva design which can shrink and cause subsidence and micromotion of the device leading to bone loss, nerve damage, and reduced mobility.

When the implant fails, patients are often required to undergo removal surgery and either toe fusion or implantation of a different device (e.g., Boss Hemi). While removal has been successful for many patients, some patients are left with permanent discomfort and long-term mobility limitations.

AWKO has retained several of the nation's premier foot and ankle surgeons to assist in our investigation and litigation efforts. We are committed to holding the manufacturers of the Cartiva toe implant accountable for the harm caused to patients.

OCALIVA

Ocaliva® (obeticholic acid) is a prescription medication developed by Intercept Pharmaceuticals to treat primary biliary cholangitis (PBC), a rare chronic liver disease. The drug received accelerated approval from the FDA in 2016 for patients who did not respond adequately to standard treatments.

Unfortunately, after serious adverse events were reported associating Ocaliva with liver injury and liver failure, the manufacturer issued a nationwide recall.

Specifically, some patients taking Ocaliva who were not previously diagnosed with cirrhosis of the liver, suffered new onset cirrhosis after starting the medication. Unfortunately, a number of these patients suffered liver failure, liver transplantation, and death.

The manufacturers of Ocaliva failed to adequately warn patients and physicians about the drug's risks and the potential for rapid liver deterioration. AWKO is at the forefront of litigation seeking to hold the manufacturers of Ocaliva accountable for the serious injuries suffered by patients.

If you or a loved one experienced liver failure, new onset cirrhosis, or required a liver transplant after taking Ocaliva, you may have a legal claim. Please contact us today to learn more about your rights and whether you may be eligible to pursue compensation.

CRYPTOCURRENCY SCAM RECOVERY

“Pig Butchering” scams—crypto frauds built on fake relationships and false investment platforms—have surged, costing Americans over $7 billion in 2024 alone. Victims are shown fake profits and persuaded to invest large sums, often losing retirement savings, home equity, or college funds.

AWKO helps victims recover stolen crypto using a results-driven strategy:

- Blockchain Tracing – Tracking stolen assets across wallets and exchanges
- Exchange Freezes – Acting fast to freeze accounts and preserve evidence
- Litigation & TROs – Filing lawsuits and seeking emergency injunctions
- Law Enforcement Support – Working with agencies to pursue subpoenas and seizures
- No Win, No Fee – Clients pay nothing unless recovery is successful

The firm also represents victims of:

- Ponzi and phishing scams
- Exchange hacks and impersonation fraud
- Crypto-based employment scams
- Other forms of digital asset theft

AWKO uses both civil litigation and law enforcement channels to maximize recovery options.

PRIVACY / DATA BREACH CLAIMS

In an increasingly digitized world, the danger of your confidential personal and/or financial information falling into the wrong hands is greater than ever before. Hardly a week goes by without a news headline about a company being hacked and its confidential consumer files being taken.

The consumers who are the victims of those data breaches face, at a minimum, anxiety from not knowing what somebody will do with your private data and the hassle of changing accounts and passwords. The unlucky ones will suffer serious financial losses as bad actors use the confidential information to drain accounts, make purchases, or take out loans in your name.

Companies with sensitive or confidential consumer data have an obligation to use best practices to keep that data safe. Unfortunately, many of them fail to do so. Recognizing this growing risk, AWKO has created a team of attorneys focused on assisting those who are victims of a data breach.

If you've received notice that you are the victim of a data breach, please call us today to discuss whether you may have a legal claim.

DECEPTIVE BUSINESS PRACTICES

We've all found ourselves in the situation where a company you're dealing with has shorted you, overcharged you or calculated something wrong. You received less than you should have or were charged too much, but what can you do about it?

If you were cheated out of $50, the cost of hiring a lawyer to help could quickly become far more than what you lost.

Often, however, you are not alone. The company that cheated you out of $50, may have cheated all its customers, to the tune of millions of dollars. When that happens, the attorneys of AWKO can file a "class action" to recover your losses, along with the losses of others in your situation.

When AWKO files a class action, you do not have to bear the cost of attorney fees. And, if you are the class representative and the class is successfully resolved, you may be granted additional compensation as the class representative.

There are many situations where a class action can provide a pathway to justice for what, on an individual basis, may be relatively small losses.

Some of those situations include:

- Bank and Insurance company overcharges
- Products that are mislabeled or don't work as advertised
- Employment violations – failure to pay overtime or misclassification of workers or time worked
- Deceptive or undisclosed fees charged by businesses

If you've received notice that you are the victim of deceptive business practices, please call us today to discuss whether you may have a legal claim.

CLASS CASES CAN PROVIDE JUSTICE EVEN FOR SMALL AMOUNTS

VICTIMS OF STATE-SPONSORED TERRORISM

The Veterans and the families of Veterans who were seriously injured or killed in the War on Terror may be eligible to obtain compensation from a fund created by Congress for the victims of state-sponsored terrorism (the “USVSST Fund”).

Specifically, Veterans seriously injured or killed in combat operations in the Afghanistan conflict (2001-2017) and/or the Iraq conflict (2003-2011) may qualify for compensation from USVSST Fund.

AWKO has a dedicated team of Veterans working to help other Veterans and Service Members. That team is led by LtCol Andrew Del Gaudio, USMC (Ret) PhD. who served 26 years as a Marine Infantry Officer and was decorated with the Bronze Star with Combat “V” and the Purple Heart for service in Iraq and Afghanistan over his six tours of combat.

Lt Col Del Gaudio and AWKO attorneys Douglass Kreis, Caitlyn Miller and Chelsie Warner recently took the firm’s first group of seven clients to trial. After consideration of all the evidence, the Court awarded the firm’s Veterans and their family members a total of more than $573,000,000.

To be eligible to make a claim, a service member must have been seriously injured or killed by enemy action in Afghanistan or Iraq. To learn more about the litigation and whether you may be eligible to file a claim, contact us today.

VA DISABILITY CLAIMS

VA service-connected disability compensation benefits are monthly payments made to Veterans and, in some cases, their families for disabilities related to events or injuries suffered in service. Veterans that apply may receive a disability rating based on the degree of one or more disabilities.

The system was created to compensate Veterans for their service-related injuries and recognizes that (1) some injuries take a long time to manifest and (2) some injuries progress or change over time. For those reasons, Veterans are entitled to bring claims for disability compensation even if they develop a disability long after discharge and Veterans have the right to reopen claims denied by the VA based upon changed circumstances.

Our firm has over three dozen Veterans on staff representing all branches, ready to discuss the facts underlying your related events and injuries. We have also established strategic partnerships with the best subject matter experts in the country to support new or renewed VA Disability claims.

If you or a loved one is a Military Veteran with service-related disabilities that are not being currently compensated by the VA, you may be entitled to compensation. Contact us today!

PERSONAL INJURY

A serious accident can change your life in an instant. Whether it's a car crash, a slip and fall, or another unexpected event, the physical and emotional toll can be overwhelming—and the full extent of your injuries may not be immediately apparent.

We represent clients in a wide range of personal injury cases, helping them recover compensation for their medical expenses, lost income, pain, emotional distress and long-term recovery needs.

When hiring an attorney to represent you in a claim for personal injury, reputation, experience and resources matter. You want a law firm on your side that:

- Will clearly explain the process to you – helping to reduce the stress of what is likely an extremely difficult time for you and your family
- Has attorneys and staff that will be both proactive in handling your claim and responsive to your questions
- Has a track record of success so that the insurance company and attorneys on the other side know you mean business
- Has the resources to ensure that you have the best experts and tools to present your claims and maximize your recovery, and
- Is committed to working with you to get the justice you deserve.

For more than two decades, AWKO attorneys have litigated against the biggest companies who employ armies of high-priced attorneys. Our skill, resources, and commitment to justice have allowed us to recover billions of dollars for our clients.

If you or a loved one have been hurt due to the carelessness of another, call us today for a free consultation.

LITIGATION HIGHLIGHT

In a recent car accident case, AWKO attorneys were able to recover hundreds of thousands of dollars for a client who was in a low-speed collision – a case that would have been settled by most personal injury attorneys for less than $25,000. In that case, the airbag in our client's car deployed. While the airbag helped lessen the injuries to the client's neck and back, the percussive effect of the airbag deploying left our client with an annoying ringing in his ears – a condition known as tinnitus.

AWKO attorneys were able to establish that the client's tinnitus would be permanent and could lead to all sorts of problems including the inability to concentrate or hold a job, sleep deprivation, depression and more. As a result, the insurance company representing the other driver paid 10-20 times more than they would have normally paid.
